

PLANTS CLOSED BY HIGH WATER START WORKING

River Recedes in Factories in Lower End of Town—Now Below Flood Stage.

Factory work has been or will be resumed Monday in three industrial plants which were forced to cease operations because of the high water during the last two weeks.

The Blake Specialty company began work this morning; the Standard Textile Products company, Thursday morning, and the Rock Island Bridge and Iron works, which was probably the hardest hit of the three plants, will begin work Monday. The water had practically cleared out of the foundry of the Blake Specialty company today, but there were still a few inches in the basement. Trucks and automobiles were able to reach the plant today without difficulty. This was the first time since the water began to rise, that machines water began to rise, that machines

The Standard Products company did not suffer from much water in the building, although the plant itself was surrounded. Today only the south-end of the yards was covered with water, and the main road was open.

The foundry of the Rock Island Bridge and Iron works had an inch or two of water today, but this was expected to recede tomorrow so that work can begin Monday. Trucks were able to reach the plant without any danger. The Bridge and Iron company was the first of the three plants to close.

The river fell half a foot in the last 24 hours, being below flood stage today. The stage at 7 o'clock this morning was 14.5 feet, 2 of a foot below flood stage. The Mississippi from below Dubuque to Muscatine will continue to fall at the present rate for the next three days, Andrew Hamrick, weather man, forecasts today.

Fourteen Good Reasons Are Cited Why Everybody Should Support the Rock Island Community Fund

Why the Rock Island Community fund, instead of individual campaigns for funds?

Because you, the people of Rock Island, have decided that you believe in one campaign, one appeal, once a year.

It provides a plan for examining by a budget committee, appointed by the citizens, who are independent of any of the organizations seeking to enter the fund, financial statements, estimated budgets and policies of the organizations soliciting contributions from the public. It is a modern and efficient method of providing financial assistance to the welfare agencies of a community.

It provides in one campaign the welfare needs of the community, protecting the public from numerous campaigns during the year. It develops civic and social consciousness through a non-partisan, non-racial, non-political and democratic appeal.

It emphasizes the community as a unit teaching that the greatest progress and prosperity will come only as the people work together for its common good.

It interests a larger number of givers who believe in "Give once but give enough for all," which not only broadens the support of the societies but widens the interest of the individual citizen. To every citizen comes a satisfied feeling that he has had a part, by his contribution, in the civic and welfare work of the community.

It affords everyone an opportunity to contribute, as by the combined efforts a greater campaign is organized, enabling more to be seen.

It eliminates the work of organizing various individual campaigns during the year. Citizens will gladly give their time and energy to one campaign where they can afford to be engaged continually in this line of effort for the various organizations in separate campaigns.

It brings all welfare and civic organizations in closer touch with the work that each organization is doing, thus avoiding duplication of work.

It enables the several societies to make their plans with greater confidence, knowing that the necessary income will be provided.

It provides one central office where the funds are received and given to the various organizations by a board of trustees.

It relieves each participating organization of the expense of a campaign and the expense of handling funds received by individual campaigns.

It provides monthly reports to the trustees of the fund so you may be sure your money is being used as outlined through the budgets.

This is a community proposition and not an organization proposition—you authorized the campaign, you appointed the committee—stand back of them, make their work easy by doing your part. Subscribe.

The campaign for the Rock Island Community Fund movement was inaugurated on the evening of Thursday, May 11, and will close on Tuesday, May 16. Five days of intensive effort will be crowned with success if you do your share.

Oratorio Society To Give Coldridge-Taylor's Cantata

The Handel Oratorio society of Augustana college with a selected membership is now busy preparing Coldridge-Taylor's cantata, "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast."

"Hiawatha's Wedding Feast," which will be performed by members from the Trinity Symphony orchestra and the soloist for the evening will be Rolfe L. Rilling, tenor. The society would welcome any singers of the tri-cities who are interested in this work. Rehearsals are held regularly on Wednesday evenings at 7:30 in the college chapel. Those who desire to join the society are asked to report to the director, Arvid Samuelson, for further information.

This will be the first time in several years that the Handel Oratorio has planned to sing during commencement. As a rule only one oratorio is given during the year, and this usually is the Messiah, which was given last December. The tri-cities have become more and more appreciative of the excellent work done by this chorus, and the music lovers will be glad to see a real treat in the presentation of this cantata by Coldridge-Taylor.

FISTIC DISPLAY IN COURT; TRUTH QUESTION CAUSE

When the truth of questions was challenged in a hearing before the probate court this morning, the spirit of the Marquis of Queensbury descended, and dignity beat a hasty retreat. In other words the atmosphere became charged with flying fists.

Principals were S. R. Kenworthy, Rock Island and J. B. Oakleaf, Moline. Judge Frank J. Landee was by force of circumstances, the third man in the "ring."

Round 1—Mr. Oakleaf took the floor to plead his case. He argued; he cited. Shortly came an interruption from the other side, questioning the veracity of Mr. Oakleaf's statements to the court. Followed hot words, a rejoinder, and—

Round 2—Mr. Kenworthy rushed from his corner at the sound of the gong. Mr. Oakleaf back to the ropes, using a chair to guard himself from the impending attack. Mr. Kenworthy pressed forward, swinging rights and lefts that found a target in spite of the efforts of Mr. Oakleaf to dodge. At this juncture, Judge Landee in the role of referee succeeded in breaking the clinch and declared the bout off.

Axel Kohler of Moline and another attorney were the only spectators in the courtroom when the trouble began. At the first indication of the outbreak, both are said to have disappeared. Probate Clerk N. E. Munson dashed across the hall to the sheriff's office. The intervention of the bailiff proved unnecessary.

FITZSIMMONS OF ROCK ISLAND IN AUTO COLLISION

The accident happened at Seventeenth avenue and Ninth street at 8:30 o'clock. Rask had driven past an automobile and Fitzsimmons was right behind him. As the truck swung around the corner, the left front wheel of Fitzsimmons' automobile hit the rear end of the plow company machine. The wheel was broken off and the front axle was badly bent.
